TO FARMERS. "EXCELSIOR."

ANALYSIS:

The most concentrated, universal and durable fettilizer ever offered to the farmer—combining all the stimulating qualities of Peruvian Guano, and the ever durable fertilizing properties of Bones. In fine dry powder, prepared expressly to drilling for drilling.

After NINETEEN YEARS' experience by the farmers of Maryland and Virginia in the use of "Excelsior," it is their unanimous opinion that an application of 100 pounds of "Excelsior" is equal to from 200 to 300 pounds of any other fertilizer or guano, and therefore fully 100 per cent cheaper.

Take Simmons' Liver Regulator

For all diseases of the Liver; Stomach and Spleen. WILL CURE

DYSPEPSIA.

i MUST OWN that your Simmons' Liver Regulator fully deserves the popularity it has attained. As a family medicine it has no equal. It cured my wife of a mala-dy I had counted incurable that wolfsbane of our American people, Dyspepsia.
A. E. P. ALBERT,
Professor in Nicholas Public School, Parish of Terrebonne, La.

MALARIOUS FEVERS You are at liberty to use my name in praise of your Regulator as prepared by you, and re-commend it to every one as the best preventive for Fever and Ague in the world. I plant in southwestern Georgia, near Albany, Georgia, and must say that it has done more good on my plantation among my negroes than any medicine I ever used. It supersedes quinine if taken in time Yours, &c., Hon. B. H. HILL, Ga.

CHILDREN!-Your Regulator is superior to any other remedy for Malarial Dispasses among children and seases among children, and it has a large sale in this section of Georgia.—[W. M. Russell, Albany, Ga.

CONSTIPATION.

TESTIMONY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF GEORGIA.-I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for constipation of my bowels, caused by a temporary derangement of the liver, for the last three or four years, and always, when used according to the directions, with decided benefit. I think it is a good medicine for the derangement of the liver—at least such has been my personal experience in the use of it.

HIRAM WARNER, Chief Justice of Georgia.

SICK HEADACHE. EDITORIAL-We have tested its virtues, personally, and know that for Dyspeperia, Biliousness and Thracebing Headache, it is the bost medicine the world eversaw. We have tried forty other remedies before Simmons' Liver Regulator, but none of them gave us more than temporary relief; but the Regulator not only relieved but cured us.—[Editor Tele-graph and Messenger, Ma-

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1877.

The late Rev. Jas. T. Johnston.

The relatives and friends of this venerable and esteemed clergyman have been expecting his death for weeks. The infirmities of age had come upon him. He had scarcely left his house for a year, and for several months he has been in his bed; gradually growing weaker, he was removed from those he loved on the night of February 28th, in the 80th year of

Though Mr. Johnston had been connected with the diocese of Virginia for nearly fifty years, he was so retiring in his habits that he was only known to the older clergy. It had not been his custom to attend the Diocesan Councils; indeed we remember of meeting him at only two, and both those in the town of Fredericksburg, where he had friends whom he loved to visit. Thus he was but little known in the diocese outside the circle of his family and friends in Alexandria. But in Alexandria he had many friends who esteemed it a pleasure to be visted by him or to visit him. His courtly manners, his pleasant conversation, his many agreeable ways, his kind words, endeared him to many, who now deeply regret his loss. Though he had been an invalid for several years, and only occasionally left his house, they will miss him, as they fail to see him on the street, or as they pass his residence and no longer see him at the win-

July 4, 1797. He was the son of Mathew Johnston and Eliza Whitefield, and grand nephew of the distinguished Rev. George Whitefield. He lived in Savannah for some years; was educated in Connecticut; he afterwards studied law, and for a short time practised that profession in the city of New York. Soon his mind was turned to other and to higher themes, and he studied theology in that city. He was ordained deacon in the Church of the Ascension, New York, by Bishop B. T. Onderdonk, November 9, 1832, and priest by the same in St. Paul's church, July 28, 1833. Soon after his ordination he visited Washington, and preached with so much acceptance he was invited to to take charge of St. Paul's church, Alexandria, and did so October 20, 1833 (succeeding the lamented Wm. Jackson). In his report to the Convention of 1834 he writes: "Although but few communicants have been added, yet the rector his assurance that the work of grace is going on. Many who have not yet made an open profession have been led by the Spirit to a serious communing with their own hearts, which he trusts and prays will ultimately result in the conviction that 'Christ is the power of God unto salvation.' He remained in charge of St. Paul's church until weak health compelled him to resign in 1859-60; but in Alexandria he has lived (save

Mr. Johnston was distinguished as a preacher. In the days of his prime, few clergymen ever preached more acceptably; indeed at times he was truly cloquent. His reading of the service made a deep impression. Only a few weeks ago we met a Methodist brother who told us of a young man who had been converted by hearing Mr. Johnston read the burial service of the Church; and not only had he been converted, but our friend told us he had stayed converted, and was still a member of the Methodist church in Alexandria. While Mr. Johnston was not the man to put himself forward, his many excellencies could not be hid, and so again and again was he invited to leave Alexandria to take charge of large churches elsewhere. St. Luke's church, St. John's church, St. Bartholomew's church, all in New York, invited him, offering him many inducements. So did St. Paul's church, Cincinnati, Christ church, St. Louis, Christ church, Savannah, and St. Anne's, Annapolis. But he preferred to live among his own people. At other times, without official ealls, he was solicited to take churches in Philadelphia, in Hartford, in New Orleans, and in New Jersey; but his answer to all was the same. In 1843 he was elected bishop of the diocese of Alabama; but he declined. In 1844 Bishop Cobbs was chosen, and he was therefore its first bishop. But Mr. Johnston preferred the duties of a parish minister to all others. He went in and out among his own people, welcomed wherever he went. In the pulpit he preached the gospel of Christnot something about it, but the very gospel. No one ever heard him preach erroneous or strange doctrines contrary to God's word, and he preached it with great earnestness.

In Alexandria he has lived all these years. Those he met with when he first came are all dead-one of the last being the venerable Mr. James Entwisle. Those he baptized in infancy are no longer young; those he married are grand parents; the town to him was not what it cace was. A new generation had come; he looked around and saw scarcely any but new faces. So after serving God in his generation, after preaching the blessed gospel of Christ for many years, he was, on the night of February 28, gathered to his fathers, "in the communion of the Catholic Church, in peace with God and in charity with his fellow men," all through Christ, in whom alone he put his trust. It was touching to know the kind and tender messages he sent to his successor at St. Paul's and to the writer of this, both of whom had been privileged to be at his bedside many times during his sickness; touching his instructions, "Send no poor person from the door without help." His mind was wandering during the last few weeks of his illness; he was unconscious for days; he knew not therefore when he died; but he will awake we doubt not, to be with Christ forever and forever.

He leaves the memory behind him of a consistent Christian; of an earnest pastor; of an eloquent and forcible preacher. We will miss him, and regret we shall see his face no more. He leaves no children. A beloved wife, who was never separated from him, save for two days, in all their married life of fifty-six years, 1 O BOXES PRIME N. Y. CHEESE, also mourns indeed. As we think of her in her loneliness, let us at least offer one prayer, that she may meekly submit, and at the last be gathered with her husband into the eternal kingdom .- Southern Churchman.
